Professor Zhu Weimin demonstrates portrait painting with oils.

Painter from Beijing Visits Campus

by Tamara Merrick

Buffalo was the first stop nationally for Zhu Weimin, a specialist in portraiture, for a day long series of workshops at Daemen College. Two other Chinese artists were scheduled to join their colleague, but were unable to leave China. They were Zhou Yinghua, a scroll painter, and Cui Ruily, who combines Western and Eastern techniques in his paintings.

The lecture part of the workshops was conducted through an interpreter. Although the lecture was informative, the interrupted flow of conversation caused by the language barrier was somewhat bothersome. However, during the lecture, the audience learned that being an artist in China is difficult, with politics ruling almost every aspect of artistic life. Another problem Chinese artists encounter is the lack of supplies and the poor quality of those supplies. Zhu Weimin admitted that brushes are cheaper in China, and since he bears down hard on his brushes with vigorous strokes, he uses them up rapidly. He also said that paint is less expensive in China but that it is sometimes difficult to obtain. This is true especially of white paint, which, when available, he buys in a large quantity.

Zhu Weimin is a Professor at the China Peoples University in Beijing, China. He teaches classes in the History of Western Art and Techniques of Painting. Professor Zhu admits that he is not the typical Chinese artist; he does not create artwork that reflects political unrest nor does he do traditional Chinese painting. Professor Zhu feels that through portrait painting he can explore the innermost beauty, thoughts, and ideals of a person. Zhu Weimin has just been honored by a successful exhibit at the National Gallery in Beijing, China. He feels that this is quite an accomplishment for him at the age of fifty-three, although he states that he feels younger than his years because he measures age by the achievements one has made throughout one's life.

The artist demonstrated portrait painting in oils for the Daemen audience. He started by simply putting down blocks of color for the hair and face. This reporter found his technique to be truly amazing because he started painting directly on canvas without the aid of a sketch.

Zhu Weimin is a very concentrated artist, with deep respect for the nature of art itself. The old Chinese saying, "The painting is the person," describes Zhu Weimin's philosophy perfectly.

Meeting the Freshman

Each year Daemen College welcomes freshmen to the campus with a week long orientation program designed to acquaint them with their new surroundings and make them feel at home. This year's freshman class consisting of commuters and residents arrived on campus during the last week of August with high expectations for their first year of college. They come from various sections of the country, bringing a variety of interests and talents that will surely contribute to the educational and cultural atmosphere of the school.

Interviews with new students revealed that they came to Daemen because of the small, friendly campus setting and because of the quality of the academic programs available. Many were also attracted by the small classes and personal attention offered by instructors.

Elaine Winkelman is an Art major from Westfield, New York. She decided on Daemen because of the small campus and the excellent art program offered by the school.

Elaine enjoys being a resident student and finds her classes interesting. In her spare time, she plans to become involved in the Art Club.

Jeff Mackey, a Physical Therapy major from Derby, New York, came to Daemen because of the competitive curriculum. He also likes the small campus, friendly people, and helpful teachers. Another factor that influenced his decision was the fact that the school is close to his home. He would like to become involved in activities on campus, but at the present time he is concentrating on his busy academic schedule.

Wanda McKee of Syracuse, New York, is a Pre-law major. She was impressed by the homey atmosphere of the campus and the concerned faculty. She feels that Daemen is much different from larger schools where students are only considered numbers. She likes being independent and being able to make her own decisions. Wanda plans to become an admissions assistant on campus.

Kim Christian, a Travel and Tourism major from Hartford, New York, found it easy to adjust to a small school. She thinks that it is a better opportunity to meet people and make friends. Her classes are going well, and she likes being more independent. Although she is far from home, Kim is happy that she has a chance to see this part of the state. During her years at Daemen, she plans to be an admissions assistant and to cheerlead.

Melanie Kotch from Syracuse, New York, is a Natural Science major. She visited the school during an open house program and was impressed by the academics and the low teacher-student ratio. Her favorite part of college life so far is the independence she has developed. Melanie plans to take part in the Tri-Beta Biological Society and to assist with admissions.

The students agree that Daemen can offer them a wide variety of advantages that a large school can't. It seems that many of the freshmen are prepared to take an active part in the events on campus and are enthusiastic about their classes. Overall, the freshman class is looking forward to a successful and productive first year of college.

Canavan Hall Dedicated

On Monday, September 16, 1985, Daemen College officially dedicated Lourdes Hall to Sister Mary Angela Canavan, renaming it Canavan Hall in her honor.

Sister Angela Canavan was President of Rosary Hill College (as Daemen was then known) from 1953 to 1973, and it was during this 20 year span that the school experienced phenomenal growth. She was instrumental in getting the college accredited by the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. This major step was responsible for increasing enrollment.

Also, Sister Angela Canavan's administration saw the acquisition of the campus apartments as well as additional land. Marian Library was constructed, as were Duns Scotus Hall, Wick Center, and what is now named in her honor, Canavan Hall.

Sister Angela has literally made this college what it is today, and it is proper that she is now being honored for her years of dedication and hard work.

Editorial: GET INVOLVED

by Michele Krowiak

Welcome all freshman and transfer students to Daemen College. To those returning, welcome back.

The Ascent has undergone, and is still undergoing, many changes. Plans have been made by the new Ascent staff for a four-page bi-monthly paper. We plan to have more regular features such as crossword puzzles, a horoscope column, a video column, and a column pertaining to curricula. These, plus other changes, are an attempt to upgrade the quality of the paper. Our goal is to create an informative and active paper.

In order to reach these goals, we need support. The staff lacks an advertising manager, a photography editor, a sports editor, a cir-ulation manager, and especially REPORTERS. If anyone is interested in writing articles, in giving ideas for articles, or becoming involved in any way, please attend the meetings which are held every Tuesday at 11:30 in the Ascent office.

No matter what field you are in, getting involved in campus activities and organizations looks good on a resume. Working on the school newspaper is a good place to start. While helping each other, we can keep the lines of communication at Daemen College open. If you have any ideas, please write them down and leave the message in the Ascent mailbox behind Wick desk. For further information, feel free to contact any member of the staff.

Rathskellar Closed

by Carla M. Smith

The Closing of the Rathskellar this semester has been a great disappointment to many returning students. The Rathskellar name has been removed from above the door, and no new name has been assigned. The question everyone is now asking is, "What will become of the room?"

At present, the Student Association, in cooperation with the Student Activities office, is trying to change the room into a place for students to gather for recreational purposes.

Plans to redecorate the room include new curtains, carpeting and furniture. Hallmark Food Service has been consulted about doing the job. The purchase of a wide screen television has been discussed. Activities planned around the T.V. will be Monday Night Football and regularly scheduled movies, compliments of VCR movie club. The D.J. booth will be having set hours so activities may include music and perhaps dancing. The construction of a stage is also being considered.

The snack bar is open and offers daily specials. The addition of a popcorn popper and new pizza ovens will increase the variety of foods available.

The Student Association and Student Activities office are working together to insure that the new room will meet the needs of the Daemen community.

Resident Council Meets

by Wanda Mitchell

Resident Council is in full force again this year. Headed by President Brian Blevins, the council is geared to improve campus life for Daemen College residents.

Resident Council meets every Monday at 8:45 P.M. in Schenck Lounge, Wick Center.

The council consists of Marvin Wilson, Director of Housing, six officers, and two dorm representatives from each dorm. At each meeting, the council discusses ways to enhance resident life and to uplift morale. Also, there is a comment session at the end of each meeting where students are welcomed to discuss negative as well as positive points of campus living.

Resident Council also sponsors many activities for the school year. On October 13th, there was a P.J. Nut and Bolt party. During finals, the council sponsors all night Study Halls where beverages and donuts are offered.

Resident Council is in need of support from residents and commuters. If anyone is interested, come and help out.

R.S.O. Seeks New Members

by Gregory Jandura

The RETURNING STUDENTS ORGANIZATION, an innovative concept on the Daemen College campus, is seeking new members.

Co-founders of the organization, Greg Jandura and Paulette Kowarko, feel that it is important to recognize and retain the steadily increasing number of returning students, both part-time and full-time. Other students forming the nucleus membership are Sue Connolly, Helen Gregory, Melanie Hermanson, and Fran Sweda.

The primary purpose of the RETURNING STUDENTS ORGANIZATION, under the advisement of Mr. Glen Woike, is to provide peer support and to facilitate transition into academic life. Older students all share the same problems and concerns in dealing with orientation, class scheduled, registration, and workloads. By addressing the real needs of returning students, the organization will provide the encouragement to such students to meet their academic goals.

Any student is welcome to attend the informal meetings which will be held frequently throughout the school year. Times and places will be announced.

CONCENTRATION FOCUS

by Karen Swallow Prior

In each issue of The Ascent, this column will feature one of the many majors offered at Daemen. It will include a little information about what areas of study the major includes, how many students are enrolled in the program, who the Head of the Department is, and what activities the concentrations are sponsoring.*

This first column will deal with the English degree. The degree offered in this major is the Bachelor of Arts, which can be earned in one of three different areas. The first is the straight English program, which requires 42 concentration credits that include a variety of literature, language, and writing courses. There are also two areas of specialization in the English program — Teacher Certification and Public Relations & Communications. These studies require other related courses. At present, these are the only two specializations offered with the English degree, but the addition of more is being considered for the future.

The Department is headed by Dr. Katherine Sullivan and includes a staff of seven full-time instructors. There are currently twenty students enrolled in the program; three of them are seniors.

Studies in the area of English involve much more than reading ancient pieces of literature by authors long-dead or learning the difference between a verb and a gerund. The program offers a wide variety of courses, both survey and specialty, covering areas of general knowledge and specific interests such as authors, time periods, and themes. Because literature is a direct reflection of the world in the times that it is written, it is necessary to include all of the elements that helped form it. As a result, each course covers a broad spectrum of knowledge such as art, philosophy, history and sociology. In studying English, you are learning about much more than individual, isolated works; you encounter a diversity of knowledge and ideas.

*If your Department is sponsoring an activity or event and would like it to appear in this column, please contact this writer or the editor of The Ascent via the box behind Wick Desk.
